Solving Complex Legal Issues

Law & Forensics' multidisciplinary global team provides a suite of cyber security services designed to ensure comprehensive, long-term cyber security for our clients. Our goal is to provide sustainable cyber security for even the most complex of systems, no matter the size of the network or number of devices.

The Background

Over 50 years ago, our client created an agreement with a competitor to limit their competition and provide guidelines as to what each company could and could not sell. The agreement limiting industry expansion held strong until four years ago. After a void in the Kosher Beef market became apparent, our client's competitor entered the Kosher Beef Industry under an alias name to fill the void.

The Situation

Our panicked client called L&F to receive litigation support in the case against their competitor. Time was truly of the essence, as our client, a small, family-run business, was quickly losing customers to the global firm that had previously agreed would not enter the Kosher Beef market space. Working quickly, L&F lawyers were able to get a Temporary Restraining Order instituted so that the client did not lose more business. A judge ordered a preliminary injunction and set the trial for three months away, an accelerated time period due to the competitors' request.

The Solution

With extensive knowledge and a deep technical expertise, the L&F team was able to search all of our client's communications and take a forensic image of the computer in just two days. Our team interviewed customers for testimony and made use of a confusion expert to further strengthen our client's case. Our opponents had to sift through thousands of computers, which took countless hours and cost millions of dollars. The most pivotal issue in the case quickly came to be the importance of understanding E-Discovery and investigations. As a result of the opponent's inability to collect data in a timely matter, the parties agree to settle with an unprecedented favorable outcome awarded to our client.

The Resolution

The depth of L&F senior employee's knowledge was crystal clear in this case. By understanding the client's computer system, the L&F team could deliver what was promised in a timely manner, when the other opponent simply could not. L&F's team of experts demonstrated the importance of discovery law, data collection, and investigation. The opponent had no expertise, and simply threw resources and money at the problem. By working efficiently, L&F was cost-effective and helped our client gain a more favorable outcome than imaginable.
